To Whom It May Concern:

We have worked with Mark Kraft from Velentium on a number of successful projects. Velentium is an invaluable partner in our new product development. From system level interface design to final installation, Velentium is our go-to partner for software development.

As a small company, we rely largely on the use of contractors for our software development. The partnership with Velentium has worked out nicely for us, as they understand our product development obstacles and risks and has helped overcome both. This scenario has allowed us to leverage highly experienced technical staff using the latest techniques, with the flexibility of a contract arrangement. They have consistently fulfilled their commitments to us, are easy to work with, and flexible enough to adapt to changing design requirements. Software development is often an unknown entity in product development. With Velentium, the software aspect of our products is a slam dunk. Software development used to be a risk and a weakness; it is now viewed as a strength. Velentium helps set us apart from our customers. After a highly successful first project, we are now on our fourth endeavor with Velentium.

Sincerely,
