

26 September 2014

Subject: Velentium

Dear Potential Velentium Client,

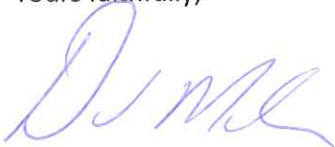

Before I found Velentium we had worked with an independent consultant to automate a test system which is critical to our business. We cannot ship new products until they have been tested on this system. Prior to Velentium's involvement progress was very slow and the results did not meet our expectations. The delays and headaches around the system development and ongoing maintenance of the system were painful and time consuming.

We had a customer requirement come up on a very tight timeline. Dan Purvis came to our facility and looked at our needs. Within days he had a thorough proposal in our hands and in less than a week the Velentium team was working on the project. In four weeks they delivered a professional well laid out system that far exceeded our expectations.

Velentium led the project process from start to finish. They proactively scheduled and led project meetings, brought critical items to our attention and made sure that we were all communicating well around the requirements.

I have no doubt that I will use Velentium again and again when our business requires custom software, data acquisition and controls services.

Yours faithfully,

David Malone

CEO